Carney Architects is proud to announce the induction of John Carney to the College of Fellows of the AIA (American Institute of Architects).

Fellowship is an honor conferred on fewer than 2,600 AIA members out of a national base of 88,000. In their award statement, the AIA recognized John Carney for his "notable contributions to the advancement of the profession of architecture through thoughtful design and planning within the community and the western mountain region, and for championing design as a core community value while looking for ways to preserve Jackson's natural assets."

John was invested in the College of Fellows at the 2008 AIA National Convention and Design Expo in Boston on May 16, 2008.
